Resolution, in March 2003 PRAs were removed from WIA reauthorization legislation know as 2 the Workforce Reinvestment and Adult Education Act of 2003. Nonetheless, the administration 3 continues to advocate the creation of PRAs. So states must be prepared to act quickly. Effective implementation of PRAs requires advance planning, monitoring of the use of funds by early PRA enrollees, and adjustment of state PRA plans during the course of enrollment. Critical participant response parameters include rates of PRA offer acceptance, intensive and training service use rates, the rate of qualification for first bonus payments, and the rate of qualification for second bonus payment. Cost data for intensive and training services are also required for planning and implementation of PRAs. This paper examines issues relating to PRA implementation based on simulations performed using administrative data provided by the state of Georgia. The W. E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research investigated these questions under...
